DETAILED ACTION

Double Patenting

1. The nonstatutory double patenting rejection is based on a judicially created doctrine grounded in public policy (a policy reflected in the statute) so as to prevent the unjustified or improper timewise extension of the "right to exclude" granted by a patent and to prevent possible harassment by multiple assignees. See In re Goodman, 11 F.3d 1046, 29 USPQ2d 2010 (Fed. Cir. 1993); In re Longi, 759 F.2d 887, 225 USPQ 645 (Fed. Cir. 1985); In re Van Ornum, 686 F.2d 937, 214 USPQ 761 (CCPA 1982); In re Vogel, 422 F.2d 438, 164 USPQ 619 (CCPA 1970); and, In re Thorington, 418 F.2d 528, 163 USPQ 644 (CCPA 1969).

A timely filed terminal disclaimer in compliance with 37 CFR 1.321(c) may be used to overcome an actual or provisional rejection based on a nonstatutory double patenting ground provided the conflicting application or patent is shown to be commonly owned with this application. See 37 CFR 1.130(b).

Effective January 1, 1994, a registered attorney or agent of record may sign a terminal disclaimer. A terminal disclaimer signed by the assignee must fully comply with 37 CFR 3.73(b).

2. Claims 1-22 are rejected under the judicially created doctrine of obviousness-type double patenting as being unpatentable over claims 1-20 of U.S. Patent No. 6,682,998. Although the conflicting claims are not identical, they are not patentably distinct from each other. Claims 1-22 of the present invention is a similar version of the claimed invention in claims 1-20 ("the patented claims") of the above-identified U.S. Patent with similar intended scope.

The difference between the present claims and the patented claims is that the patented claims do not mention a computer system having a circuit board and a processor coupled to the circuit board. The patented claims further fail to recite that the claimed semiconductor assembly is mounted on the circuit board. In other words, the patented claims do not claim the usage of the semiconductor assembly in a computer system. However, at the time the invention was made, it was known that a computer system comprises a circuit board of sorts and a processor of sorts, the circuit board of sorts is coupled to the processor and includes at least a semiconductor assembly. See, for example, Hsieh et al. U.S. Patent Application Publication 20020076522, which teaches a computer system having a circuit board (PCB) and a processor (CPU), the circuit board comprising a semiconductor assembly (chip), and the processor coupled to the circuit board. Furthermore, although the patented claims do not claim such usage, the patent claims also fail to exclude such usage; therefore such usage at the time the invention was made would have been obvious.

3. Claims 1-22 ("the present claims") are provisionally rejected under the judicially created doctrine of obviousness-type double patenting as being unpatentable over claim 1-54 ("the copending claims") of copending Application No. 10/793,564. Although the conflicting claims are not identical, they are not patentably distinct from each other.

In a similar situation as in the case of the patented claims, it would have been within the ability of a person of ordinary skill in the art, therefore would have been obvious, to mount the semiconductor assembly of the copending claims in a circuit board, couple the circuit board to a processor, and form a computer system from such a circuit board and processor, because, at the time the invention was made, it is known that a computer system, similar to the one described by Hsieh, has a circuit board including a semiconductor assembly and a processor and because the copending claims fail to exclude such usage.

This is a provisional obviousness-type double patenting rejection because the conflicting claims have not in fact been patented.
